Do you know anyone who has, or may have dementia?
Have you wondered how dementia is diagnosed?
Is it possible for families, adults and children, to understand and discuss dementia with each other in a helpful way, which improves their communication with a person with dementia? Yes.

This story, told by Leo, is about how his family learned to understand what was happening to their great-aunt, 'Graida', - before and after she was diagnosed with Alzheimer's dementia.

Visiting the Alzheimer Café helps the family learn how Graida is struggling to adjust. Dementia is much more than 'just forgetfulness'.

They also learn about:

- Why she struggles to pay attention
- Different types of memory working differently
- Adjusting communication from facts to feelings

When Graida moves into a care home – they develop a routine for visiting her. They learn to stay connected and positive, despite the inevitable changes.

Feedback about the book since it's launch in Oct, 2016:

- "The readability of the book is remarkable... and helps remove the fear of the unknown." Student, Age 19
- "I found it fascinating. I learned so much though I didn't expect to. The illustrations help make things simple."
- "I understand my mother better now, and how caring for her Mum with dementia has affected her."
- "My husband went to visit his grandmother the day after reading it; he hadn't seen her in 2 years."
- "I visit people with dementia in the nursing home very differently now; I wish I had known that sooner."
- "Your book has been an instant hit. This is so useful and simple for health care students".
